The Congress—A National Institution

FAMED among travelers everywhere, the Congress has come to be looked upon as a national institution. Here one meets the foreign ambassador, the captain of industry, the Eastern Prince, the opera star—all those who know and appreciate the art of hospitality.

Peacock Alley and the Pompeian Room are known internationally, and famous are the banquet halls and ball rooms—the Gold Room, the Elizabethan Room, the Florentine Room, the Louis XVI Room.

Then, too, the excellence of its cuisine, the service of its exceptional corps of attaches, its superb appointments—all have made for the supremacy of the Congress.

KEWANEE

More big buildings are heated by KEWANEE
Steel Boilers than by all other makes combined

Kewanee Boilers are built of steel—and steel for boiler building beats any other material.

35 years ago we began to build Kewanee Boilers of STEEL because it was the one best material for boilers. The fact that more big buildings are heated with Kewanee Boilers than by all other makes combined proves that Kewanee Boilers are universally accepted as the "Standard."

Ask big building owners; ask leading architects, engineers and heating contractors; ask the janitors who take care of boilers. They will all tell you that if you buy a Kewanee Boiler you are buying what is the acknowledged leader for heating big buildings.

INTRODUCTION

The first Chicago City Directory published by R. L. Polk & Company is herewith presented. It is the 71st edition of the directory and the first issued since 1917.

Chicago received its charter March 4, 1837, when it covered an area of 4,173 square miles and had a population of 4,180.

The first attempt at getting out anything in the way of a Chicago Directory was in September, 1839, when the Common Council ordered the revision and printing of the Laws and Ordinances of the city. This book contained a list of 276 business men of the city with the location of their places of business in addition to the Laws and Ordinances and four and one-half pages of advertising.

The following as to the 1839 Directory is taken from an article by Reuben H. Donnelley, which appeared in the Directory Journal, December, 1903:

"The Directory proper is contained on nine pages, set in Long Primer, Old Style type, and shows only 276 names. There were six churches. Locations were not given as precisely as now, as indicated by the following example:

"Abel, Sidney, postmaster, office, Clark street
"Ogden, William B., Esq., Kinzie street

"Paxton, Peter, mason, Clark street, brick building above Randolph street
"Post, Dr., residence lake street, office, Dearborn street

"The printer's font of type was evidently very limited, and not 'sorted' for directory work, hence he did not have 'caps' enough for street names, etc., which were therefore put into 'lower case'."

"Gray, John, Chicago hotel, Wolf point.

"Seymour, Jesse, sauganash hotel, market street
"Even this economy of material did not quite serve the purpose, and toward the end he was compelled to use italic and full-face caps in place of roman.

An attempt was made at alphabetical arrangement beyond the first letter, thus the 'H's' commence with Hurd, while Hall does not appear until the nineteenth line, and the letter closes with Hayward.

"In the early days the directory man's life, as now, was full of trouble, as evidenced by the pathetic paragraph with which the publisher closes his modest volume:

"A number of omissions will probably be found in the foregoing Directory, in consequence the difficulty (sic) in procuring a suitable mass of information and resources for it; but it is the intention of the publisher, as soon as circumstances will permit, to issue another edition enlarged and otherwise improved."

"There are but few copies of this Directory in existence, and in consideration of its great historical value, and to preserve it from oblivion, it was decided (as nearly as possible a facsimile) in the Chicago City Directory for 1875."

The first Directory of the city was carelessly canvassed for by James Wellington Norris, an attorney, during the latter part of 1843, and was issued in 1844. It contained about 1,100 names. Population at that time, about 8,000. The following is taken from the historical sketch given in the 1844 Directory:

"The credit of the city is easily established upon a permanent foundation and cannot easily be shaken.

"Our common schools are worthy of special notice,

"We have also a medical school chartered by the legislature in 1837 and several schools sustained by private munificence.

"The Mechanics Institute and the Young Men's Association are prominent in importance. These institutions will be both useful and ornamental to the city.

"We have other societies designed to meet the intellectual wants of the community, which may be mentioned the Chicago Lyceum—the oldest literary society in the place.

"Our theater—very pretty once—has been in operation the past season, and met with some encouragement; but it must be confessed that, at present, the prospects of the drama are not flattering.

"In facilities for the accommodation of the traveling public Chicago has made progress. In early times our inns were miserable in the extreme. Now we have eighteen hotels and houses of public entertainment, many of them large and splendid establishments, not inferior to any in the West."

"An extensive staging business has grown up here, and may be described as an instance of enterprise and public spirit on the part of those engaged in it. The several lines of stages centering here for speed, safety and comfort are not excelled by any in the country.

"Ship building has been carried on here to some extent. A steam propeller, registering 270 tons, was built the past season, and a schooner of about 200 tons burden, to be called the Maria, is now in process of construction by the same builder, and probably will be launched in the spring.

"We have four large packing houses, and all of them have done a heavy business the past year. The port packing is only just commencing but will, it is thought, be extensive.

"Much must be said in commendation of our fire companies—all of which are highly efficient.

"Our military companies will speak for themselves.

"Consider the age of the city, and the fact that our population has been increasing almost every nation under heaven and speak so many instances of the existing state of its society confectional upon Chicago.

"The most becoming respect is paid to the institutions and forms of public worship.

"The peace and good order of society is worthy of remark—brawls and fights are extremely rare in the streets—and it may justly be said that a more peaceful and quiet population can nowhere be found."

The statistical portion of the Directory a page is devoted to the tremendous growth of the post-office business.

The post-office at that time was on the west side of Clark street, between Lake and Randolph streets, and William Stuart was postmaster.

"A weekly mail line to the East," says the book, "was received here on horseback in 1833, Abel being postmaster. The next year it was received in a two-horse wagon weekly."

In 1834 a four-horse stage line was established, eastwardly-tri-weekly in 1835. In 1837 there was a daily eastern mail. Since Abel postmaster. There are now received and made up at the office forty-eight mails weekly, and the receipts of the office amount to about $10,000." [The receipts of the Chicago office for Calendar year ending December 31, 1922, were $46,470,304.99.]

The Directory was then published in 1845-46 by J. Cannell & Co., compiled by J. Wellington Norris; 1846-47, Norris & Gardner; 1848-49, J. W. Norris and L. S. Taylor; 1849-50, O. P. Hathaway and J. H. Taylor; 1851, W. W. Danenhower; 1852-53, Udall & Hopkins; 1853 and 1854, Hall & Smith; 1854-55, Edward H. Hall & Co. (Classified Business Directory included for the first time in this issue); 1855-56, compiled by E. H. Hall and printed by Robert Fergus; 1857, Case & Co., compiled by John Gager and printed by A. B. Case and Charles Scott; 1857, John Gager; 1858, compiled by Tanner, Halpin & Co. and published by D. B. Cooke & Co.; 1859, Smith & DuMoulin; 1859-60, compiled by R. V. Kennedy & Co., published by D. B. Cooke & Co.; 1860-61, compiled by T. M. Halpin & Co., published by D. B. Cooke & Co.; 1861-62, 1862-63, 1863-64, Halpin & Baily; 1864-65, T. M. Halpin & Co.; 1864-65 and 1865, John C. W. Bailey; 1865-66, T. M. Halpin; 1866, Edwards, Greenough & DeVed; 1866-67 and 1867, John C. W. Bailey; 1868, Edwards & Co.; 1869-70, 1870, 1871, 1872, 1873, Richard Edwards; 1874-75, "Lakeside City Directory of Chicago," Williams, Donnelley & Co., publishers and printers; 1877-78, "Lakeside City Directory of Chicago," Donnelley, Loyd & Co., publishers; 1879, "Lakeside City Directory of Chicago," Donnelley, Gassette & Loyd, publishers; 1880, "Lakeside City Directory of Chicago," Chicago Directory Co., publishers.

Since 1880 to 1917 the Chicago Directory was published by The Chicago Directory Co., from 1880 to 1887 under the management of Thomas H. Hutchinson, and after that date under the management of Reuben H. Donnelley. From 1880 to 1891 it was a two-column book. In 1892 it was changed to a three-column book, and in 1910 to a five-column book. The alphabetical section of this present volume is printed in six columns.

Following publication of the 1917 edition, Mr. Donnelley, having expanded and developed his business interests along other channels, found it necessary to utilize the services of the city directory staff in other departments. Due partly to this, but principally to conditions resulting from the World War, no directory was issued in 1918. However, need for a new edition was soon manifest. Appreciating the impossibility of successfully publishing without an adequate force experienced in city directory work, Mr. Donnelley, not wishing to interfere with work in other departments of his organization, yet, having the interests of the city at heart, invited R. L. Polk & Company to take over the publication. After repeated efforts on his part, supplemented by the urgent solicitation of business and commercial organizations of the city, R. L. Polk & Company was induced to undertake the work.

Chicago is indebted to Mr. Donnelley for his untiring efforts in its behalf. We acknowledge with deepest gratitude the co-operation and assistance rendered by Mr. Donnelley and members of his organization.

Neither effort nor expense has been spared to make the information as complete, accurate, and up-to-date as is humanly possible. All that fifty-three years of experience and a nation-wide organization could provide, have been given to the creation of this new edition.

Men occupying executive positions in the Polk organization in other cities were brought from all sections of the country to assist with the work. Never before was so large a force, experienced in making directories, brought together on any publication. It was this force that trained and handled the army of local men and women employed to gather the information and assist with the compilation. The gathering, compiling and printing of the information was a stupendous task and we hope the directory will meet with the approval of patrons.

POPULATION

There are 1,258,426 individual names listed in this edition of the directory. Of this number it is estimated 84,071 are names of people who, though in business or employed in Chicago, reside in the suburbs or outside the city limits; deducting this number leaves 1,174,355 names of people living within the city limits. Using the multiplier of two and one-half to allow for the names of married women, children, and young women unemployed and living at home, which were not included in the directory enumeration, gives Chicago a population of 2,935,887, which can be considered a conservative estimate. The U. S. Census of 1920 credited Chicago with a population of 2,701,705. While it is doubtful if in the interval which elapsed between the time the Government took the census and the taking of the information embodied in this directory the population increased 234,182, as these figures would indicate, it must be borne in mind the city directory canvass was handled by an organization composed of men thoroughly experienced, whose life work, day in and day out the year round, is to supervise the gathering of names.

For the purposes of the directory canvass, the city was divided into twelve districts. Offices were established in these districts with capable superintendents in charge and each office had its own individual organization of salesmen, workers, enumerators, and examiners to handle the examination of the information as it was brought in each day. This served as a check on the enumerators, and insured both accuracy and thoroughness as every house, apartment, and place of business had to be accounted for. The canvass extended to every nook and corner within the city limits. Despite this, wishing to give Chicago the most complete directory possible, the publishers solicited the co-operation of employers to furnish lists of their employees showing their occupations and where they lived. These lists were copied and the information embodied in the compilation. While this, of course, resulted in an enormous duplication of names, and an additional cost of many thousands of dollars, it served as a double check, insuring the insertion of many names not brought in on the canvass, and the correctness of the occupations as given at the homes. Hotels and clubs furnished lists of their permanent guests, the names of many of whom it would have been impossible to secure through any other source. A careful compilation then eliminated any duplication of names for the same individuals.

Were the lines of type in the 3,124 pages between the covers of this directory attached end to end they would form a chain one hundred and one miles long.

Copies of this Chicago Directory will be placed in directory libraries maintained in all of the principal cities in the United States and Canada where they will serve to advertise Chicago and its business interests.

Directories of other cities are on file in the directory library in the office of the publishers, 538 South Clark Street, where they are accessible for reference and a cordial invitation is extended subscribers to make use of this library.

A supplementary edition of this directory is being reproduced in a souvenir volume entitled "Chicago, The Great Central Market," which will be distributed by and with the compliments of the publishers to U. S. Embassies, Consulates and Consular Agents throughout the world, as well as to commercial organizations and important civic bodies throughout the United States and Canada.

This special edition contains a story of Chicago edited by the Chicago Association of Commerce appearing on pages 13 to 153 inclusive, followed by a reproduction of the advertisements appearing in the Buyers'

Guide, pages 301 to 796, inclusive; following this the display insertions in the classified business section, pages 2832 to 3124, will be reproduced under the headings under which they are listed. Through this special edition advertisers and those who contracted for display insertions in this edition of the directory will derive the benefit of an international circulation in addition to the local and national circulation of the directory itself.

This souvenir volume is handsomely bound, and, in addition to the circulation given it by the publishers, copies will be sent out by the Industrial Department of the Chicago Association of Commerce to those seeking information regarding Chicago and its business interests.

In the publication of this edition of the directory it is hoped a foundation has been laid for the continued publication of a Chicago City Directory at such regular intervals as will best serve the need of great and growing Chicago of the future.

We highly appreciate and thank all, who, by their patronage have made this publication possible, as well as those who have contributed to the accuracy and completeness of the directory by their co-operation in furnishing the necessary information.

R. L. POLK & COMPANY.

REVIEW OF CONTENTS

THE HISTORICAL AND STATISTICAL SECTION, pages 13 to 153, printed on super-calendered paper and interspersed with cuts, clearly visualizes the greatness of Chicago in its civic, commercial, financial and industrial aspects. This section was prepared by the Chicago Association of Commerce for the purpose of enlightening, not only the residents of the city, but of the countless thousands who consult the Directory in the Directory Libraries maintained in all of the important cities of the country. The statistics will prove interesting and instructive not only to the present generation, but to those succeeding, to accentuate and demonstrate the aptness of Chicago's famous slogan, "I Will."

THE MISCELLANEOUS SECTION, pages 154 to 192, contains information concerning City, County, State and Federal Officials, Asylums and Homes, Churches, Clubs, Libraries and Reading Rooms, Museums, Parks, Playgrounds and Bathing Beaches, Social Settlements and Recreation Centers, Miscellaneous Societies, Secret and Benevolent Societies; also Trade and Labor Organizations.

THE STREET AND AVENUE GUIDE is included in pages 193 to 228; the streets and avenues are arranged in alphabetical order; the intersecting streets and avenues are shown so that the location of a given number can be easily ascertained.

THE BUYERS' GUIDE occupies pages 301 to 796. This section of the Directory, printed on enamel paper, includes advertisements of many of the leading manufacturing, business and professional interests of Chicago. They have been carefully grouped by departments and are indexed under classified headings and otherwise in various parts of the Directory. A casual perusal of these advertisements will picture many interesting phases of the city's activities. They are not display advertisements, primarily, however, but rather are preference advertising at its best. The purpose of a Directory is to direct. In a great commercial and industrial municipality like Chicago the need for this kind of information readily at hand is very great, and the general appreciation of this need is evidenced by the liberal patronage the City Directory enjoys in many and varied lines of trade.

THE ALPHABETICAL LIST OF NAMES of citizens, business concerns and corporations covers pages 798 to 2829.

THE CLASSIFIED BUSINESS DIRECTORY is embraced in pages 2832 to 3124; this section exhibits the various manufacturing, mercantile and professional occupations compiled in alphabetical order by appropriate headings; this feature constituting an invaluable and indispensable epitome of the business interests of the city. "The Directory is the common intermediary between Buyer and Seller."

THE LEGAL BLUE BOOK, printed on tinted paper and inserted opposite page 2988, contains the professional cards of prominent Lawyers of the Chicago Bar.
